"He is not simply a critic of Israel," said the rabbi, who moved to Israel as a teen and served in the Israel Defense Force.

"He does not believe in coexistence" or "two states for two peoples."

Despite relentless accusations of antisemitism, Mamdani, a 34-year-old Muslim immigrant and supporter of the anti-Israel Boycott, Divestment, Sanctions movement, captured one-third of Jewish voters in the city to win the mayor's race last week, according to exit polls.

The mayor-elect has repeatedly refused to condemn the phrase "Globalize the intifada," widely seen as a call to violence, and espouses extremist positions indistinguishable from Israel's "most implacable foes," according to the rabbi.

Hirsch compared the dangerous ideology to that of terrorist groups Hamas and Hezbollah and their supporter Iran.

During the religious leaders' meeting with Mamdani in August, security was the focus as the group expressed the "fears of New York Jews" if he were elected.

The rabbi warned that a phalanx of security alone can't protect the Jewish community — only a safe environment can.

“And history has proven conclusively that what starts with Jews never ends with Jews. The city itself will become much nastier and much more violent,” he warned.

Hirsch claimed that Mamdani does not believe in “coexistence” in Israel.

“And that is the main threat from the ideologically driven anti-Zionism of Zohran Mamdani.”

Congregant Ronen Schwartzman told The Post on Sunday that he’s “proud” of his rabbi for “being vocal when you need it.

He’s very pro-Israel and not afraid to speak up — a big contrast to the Reform movement, who don’t always support” the Jewish state,’’ the man said.

Some city Jewish activists championed the “progressive” rabbi’s speech, too.

Mamdani refused to condemn Hamas because he agrees with it -- Hamas does not want any "two-state solution" because Hamas believes that one of the states, Israel, does not deserve to exist. Mamdani supports "globalizing the intifada." Intifada means "armed uprising," and it is NOT limited to Israel...

You can thank the AOC generation of dumbed-down democrats.

Today's generation is not an accident—it's the result of decades of liberal indoctrination, soft parenting, and a culture that rewards emotion over intellect. From classrooms to social media feeds, young Americans have been conditioned to s...See more

If our forefathers could see what democrats have done to our country, they would all be Republicans. Democrats hate America and destroy and dismantle everything that makes our country great. They want our country to be third world and Communist.
